INCIDENTS, &c., AT THE PITTSBURG FIRE —The Pittsburg papers of the 15th inst. give the following incidents that occurred on the 10th and since.

When the first first commenced, the District Court was a session, engaged in the trial of a very interesting case, avolving the validity of a will; the witnesses and pertical vare neighbors of Mr. Forward, who was engaged for the infence, and when it was found that his house must be onsumed, they rushed to his sid, and by great exertion aved the largest portion of a very valuable library, noting of which would have been saved but for their time-or suspending for a mement the innate nobility of his soul.

In one case we are told that a Pittaburg merchant, who had been to Philadelphia to purchase goods, heard, on his way home, that his property had been wholly destroyed by the fire, and that; as a consequence, he was a ruined man. He immediately returned to Philadelphia, called upon he merchant from whom he had made the purchases, and begged him to take back his goods, remarking that he was not able to pay for them. The other was evidently touched—but with scarce a moment's hesitation, he stepped to his writing desk, and as promptly as it could be done, handed to his honest hearted customer of Pittaburg a bill and receipt for the whole amount—more than $1000.

A new Lowell to be built—Effects of Damming—the Herald's Washington Correspondence—Official Organ—Morton not yet returned—State of the Sufferers—New French System a la Church—A Religious Symptom-The English Steamers-John Bull, Texas and Oregon-Redding & Co.'s Depot-Effects of Cheap Literature, &c &c.

John Bull. Texas and Oregon—Redding & Co.'s Depot—Effects of Cheap Literature, & C. & C. In enumerating the increase of the manufacturing business in the old Bay State, in my last, I forgot to say a word about a new project of considerable moment, which is worth chronicling. At the last session of our Legislature, Samuel Lawrence, of this city, and some other influential men, gotta charter for a new company, to be called the Essex Company, with a privilege to dam the Merrimac river, and build mills there. The stock of this company is pretty much taken up, and the dam is to be commenced this summer. The dam will be built at Andover, a mile or two out from the centre of that town, and will create a water power of greater capacity than that at Lowell. The consequence will be, in the present rage for manufacturing, that a new Lowell will be built up there, to rival the city of that name now so celebrated throughout America. The people who have got hold of the affair are heavy capitalists, and men of great energy, and it must go ahead.

In perusing your Washington correspondence, which by the way, is the best that is offered to the public by any paper. I noticed that a great deal is now said at the capital about the official organ. The post of government editor seems to have been established as a regular office, as by common consent; and if we are to have the game of an official organ of the national government, I don't see why we should not have the name also. Heretofore, the organ of the government, has been rather a quasi affair, at most only semi, and sometimes only demi-semi-official; but now it appears that things are to be called by their right names, and the editor of the administration paper is to be regularly installed into office, with the customary forms and ceremonies. Congress has never directly recognized such an officer heretofore; but it is to be presumed that under the new arrangement, there will be some law or resolution passed at the next presumed that under the new arrangement ceremonies. Congress has never directly recognized such an officer heretofor; but it is to be presumed that under the new arrangement, there will be some law or resolution passed at the next session, regularly establishing and recognizing the organ of the government, and its conductor or organist. Perhaps, in lieu of a stated salary, the public printing may be bestowed as a compensation for the duties of the office. If the proprietors of the organ will do it as cheap and as well as another, why not?

Gov. Morton, the Collector in esse, has not yet returned from Washington, and great is the anxiety in consequence, on the part of incumbents and expectants. There are, I suppose, some five hundred and seven trembling expectants, whose patrionic desire to serve the government aimost unmans them, and to say the least, quite incapacitates them for any other business just at present. There are also some seventy-one quivering incumbents who know not what they shall be, but who fervently pray that they may not share the fate of Elijah, and be translated. This state of mind has a contant expectants, viz: making them remarkably assiduous in the discharge of their duties, and protoundly impressed with the virtues and talents of the excellent Collector that is to be. In view of this pittiful exhibition of humanity, a disinterested, thin-shoed, thread-bare philosopher may exclaim, as he whiffs his long-nine in his cob-webbed garret, "O tempora! O mores!" What consummate jackasses! The wonder of the hour now on the carpet here, is Dr. Church, a French gantleman of education and refined manners, who has introduced a new and highly successful system of teaching the French language. He has roome at the Tremont Temple, where he lectures every evening to large classes of gentlemen, and during the day to numerous fair ladies. He teaches one to read, write, speak, and know the meaning of the language at one and the same time; and by a series of large lettered diagrams or tables, impresses his instructions most strongly upon the mind.

Senators that deleated the Oregon bill at the last reasion. They didn't like the looks of Polk's cabinet.

Your agents here, Redding & Co., are doing a pretty stiff business. Their large establishment in State street is well supplied with the literature of the day in all its branches, well attended by obliging and polite salesmen, and thronged with purchasers. The vestibule of their establishment has become a sort of literary excliange, and high 'change with them is when the Southern mail arrives with the Herald. A man has to put in early to get one, so great is the rush to "see what Bennett says."

There are some other good Literary Depots here, including Haliburton & Dudley's, but Redding's is the best, as it is the oldest. This is a new kind of business among us, which has sprung up within a few years, in consequence of the great reduction in the cost of making books, papers, &c., and the wonderful facilities for speedy intera, umunications between different parts of the count. The appetite for reading has thus been greatly increased, to the manifest improvement of the body politic, for when people are reading some good work, they are kept out of worse pursuits, and, to some extent, their minds are elevated and enlightened. But there is yet room for much improvement.
